There is a lot of debate surrounding Arctic amplification, mainly over its causes. There have been numerous studies attempting to rank the relative importance of certain feedbacks and transports in contributing to Arctic amplification.

Projections of future Arctic climate depend on models adequately capturing and simulating these feedbacks and transports.